verdict of coroner's jury. What is probably the most collblooded murder ever committed in the history of Pensacola occurred yesterday when John White, the wellknown ciothier, was shot dead as he sat in his chair, by Wm. F. Wiliams, a clerk in his store, the murderer hen turning his weapon on his fellow clerks and seriously wounding Jas. White, the dead man's son, and Edward Dansby, manager of the furnishing department of the store. A 38-calibre Smith & Wesson revolver was the weapon used, all five cartridges being fired and four of them taking effect. A rush was at once made for the store, Cuyler McMillan, Constable Chas. Bobe, and Robt. McLellan, a printer being the first to enter and in various parts of the city registered Dicks, of South Carolina, and Thomas the scene that met their eyes was a bloody and tragic one.

Jas. White, covered with blood, was struggling with his father's slayer, who still held the smoking weapon in his hand. As Mr. McMillan entered. young White called out: "Take him, Mr. Cuyler, I don't know whether he has killed me or not."

Mr. McMillan grasped Williams around the arms and body, while Constable Bobe and Mr. McLellan seized the revolver, wrenching it from the frenzied man's hand. The weapon had been broken and the empty cartridges ejected, apparently for the purpose of reloading. Williams was immediately hurried over to the county
